Add Your Name, to a Spectacular 'Memorial Wall' The Art Mural on Te Awahou Nieuwe Stroom – in Foxton

Add Your Name to Our Art Mural

At the 2021 Big Dutch Day Out – some 80 families and businesses added their name to a unique, brilliantly colourful Art Mural on the outside wall of the Oranjehof museum in Foxton.

As part of our 2022 grote feest, we want to offer up the very last 30 or so spots for Sponsorship.

You can now add your family's name – or any name you choose, like children or grandparents, or your business – next to the Art Mural.

World-renowned Dutch Mural Artist, Jan van der Ploeg (in Amsterdam), has designed the colourful Wall Painting – some 40 metres long and 4m high.

We have two spots left for Major Sponsors ($5,000 each). Plus, we're creating a new panel for 30 more individual Sponsor Names ($250).

Add your own name – or someone else's – to our Memorial Wall. And you'll be in great company!

An Exceptional Place

Almost every visitor who walks into Te Awahou Nieuwe Stroom, comments on how beautiful it is.

The stylish lines of understated architecture, the interactive and playful exhibitions, a bright and inviting colour palette – it all creates exceptional spaces and exquisite ambiance...

Everything here tells the story of three cultures – each with their own identity, sitting side by side in the spirit of harmony.

From the carved Maihi panels on the front, to the towering presence of De Molen – next to our Oranjehof national Dutch museum – this facility features the icons and the multi-cultural stories of our nation.

We celebrate diversity in all its beauty. And that achievement won us a major Museums Aotearoa award for 'Excellence', in 2018.

The Artist

Jan van der Ploeg, with links to Dutch art movement 'De Stijl', has created murals around the world. In Aotearoa New Zealand, he is well-known for his Wellington mural.

In the spirit of multi-cultural partnership with which Te Awahou Nieuwe Stroom was established, Jan consulted with the three partners to create his design. He kindly agreed to let the Oranjehof Dutch Connection Centre use the Mural as a fundraiser.

The Memorial Wall – Fundraiser for the Oranjehof Museum

Designed in Partnership: The wall features a wave pattern that reflects Te Awahou Nieuwe Stroom's identity – with colours that are linked to the awa river heritage of Te Awahou Foxton, mana whenua, Aotearoa's skyline, and the Netherlands with its watery landscape.

The huge size of the Memorial Wall gives it a cheerful impact that feels open, playful and welcoming.

Cultural links: Jan's bold and modern design showcases contemporary Dutch art and design, also on display in the Oranjehof Museum.

Meaning: The Art Mural captures the spirit of Te Awahou Nieuwe Stroom. Te Awahou means 'new stream'. In Dutch, Nieuwe Stroom also means a 'flow' in a new direction, with 'new energy'.

Awa – Rivier: For both the Māori and Dutch Partners in Te Awahou Nieuwe Stroom, their awa or rivier holds special meaning – so the wave theme of the Mural is culturally important to both.

Colour symbolism: Moving from the Dutch colour of orange, to the colours of 'the land of the long white cloud', which then merge into our national colour black, flowing into kākāriki green that symbolises mana whenua and the Piriharakeke museum

Direction: The giant waves stretch out towards the natural environment and the River Loop reserve, leading people into the other part of the Cultural Park.

The Art Mural is iconic and symbolic of Te Awahou Nieuwe Stroom – bold, modern, colourful, multicultural and inclusive. Its simplicity – at that huge size – gives it impact.

The image is drawing art-lover visitors to the museums, and probably features in 1000's of selfies.
