

Tamaris Livera is proud to support the New Zealand Academy of Fine Arts, reflecting her deep appreciation for New Zealand art and her commitment to championing local artists.

Much like acquiring a piece of fine art, buying or selling a home is an emotional and financial investment. Both require an intuitive understanding of value, an appreciation for beauty, and the ability to make informed decisions within a budget.

As a seasoned real estate professional with Lowe & Co Realty—Wellington’s number one real estate agency —Tamaris expertly navigates this intersection, helping her clients find homes that inspire and investments that grow in value.

With an extensive background in banking—including roles at the Reserve Bank of New Zealand and other major financial institutions—Tamaris brings a rare combination of financial acumen and artistic appreciation to real estate. Over the past eight years, she has built a reputation for her integrity, strategic negotiation skills, and client-focused approach, ensuring every transaction is as seamless and rewarding as possible.

Tamaris understands that real estate is more than just a transaction—it’s about finding a space that resonates, just like a beautifully curated artwork. With deep knowledge of Wellington’s property market, she provides expert guidance, alleviating stress while securing the best outcomes for her clients.

A proud Wellingtonian and dedicated advocate for the arts, Tamaris is thrilled to contribute to the Academy and the creative community it fosters.

Founded in 2015, Lowe & Co Realty has become the premier destination for real estate excellence in Wellington. Recognising the need for a more effective approach to selling property, the agency set out to redefine industry standards and deliver exceptional results for clients. With an unwavering focus on maximising value, Lowe & Co has rapidly become the number one agency in Wellington by listing volume, building a formidable track record of success, fostering lasting client relationships, and earning its place as Wellington’s top real estate agency.